

Supportive housing project opens in Kamloops

People who are homeless or at risk of homelessness now have access to more affordable housing thanks to today's official opening of the $7.2-million Georgian Court apartment building, announced Claude Richmond, MLA for Kamloops, and Kevin Krueger, MLA for Kamloops-North Thompson.

“Georgian Court will give people access to affordable housing and the support services they need to successfully move off of the streets and build a home,” said Richmond. “This new supportive housing development will benefit homeless British Columbians as well as the entire community of Kamloops.”

Today we are so excited to celebrate the opening of Georgian Court and look forward to seeing the positive impact it will have in our community,” said Dawn Hrycun, CEO of the John Howard Society. “Working with government and community partners, we are committed to providing stable, supportive housing and support services to help people find their place in society.”

Georgian Court is a four-storey wood-frame building that offers 48 self-contained one-bedroom apartments. The ground floor consists of 10 apartments as well as amenity and administrative areas. The second and third floors each have 13 apartments and the fourth floor has 12 apartments. All apartments are wheelchair accessible.
